Chicago, IL – May 21, 2016 - Foodio, the Charlottesville, VA technology company providing custom online ordering solutions for restaurants, has raised $585,000 in an oversubscribed Series Seed funding that was completed in just 50 days. At the NRA Show Foodio will celebrate its financing by waiving its 5% commission for six months for the first 50 restaurants who sign up with no further obligation. Interested restaurants should email sales@getfoodio.com.

CEO Rory Stolzenberg says of the financing, "We're thrilled to get it done so fast and focus on helping restaurants make more money. We're doubling in size every 3 months and entering new markets. We're hiring key people to manage onboarding and customer success and we are hiring salespeople." Foodio is accepting interview requests at the NRA Show. Requests should be emailed to jobs@getfoodio.com.

Foodio now serves over 300 restaurants in New York, New Jersey and the Mid-Atlantic. Foodio is dedicated to leveling the technology playing field for independent restaurants and small chains. Foodio uses a restaurant's own brand and website, helping them break their dependence from aggregators like Grubhub-Seamless and compete against national chains by delivering a streamlined customer experience without sending loyal customers to a third party marketplace. Foodio facilitates both take-out and delivery, but Foodio is not a delivery company.
